REMARKS AND SUGGESTIONS.

Our schools, for the most part, have been wisely managed and efficiently taught. Of the eleven different teachers employed, the work of all but two has been satisfactory. Most of them have shown a faithfulness and devotion which should entitle them to the gratitude of the people. The clearness and accuracy of the instruction, the thoroughness of the scholarship, the quiet and businesslike air of the schoolroom, the gentleness yet firmness of the discipline, the interest in study, and pleasant relations existing between teacher and pupils, which we have observed in most of the schools, have been very gratifying. Very gratifying also, has been the evidence shown by the parents of appreciation of the teachers' work. The services of women, in school as elsewhere, are worth more than those of girls.

The town has furnished books for three years at an average expense of about two hundred dollars a year. This is a great convenience to parents, but a great care to school board and teachers. The law empowers us to provide books for schools. We do not see that it authorizes us to provide them for families. Accordingly we have refused to loan books during vacations; but have offered to sell them for cash and to repurchase them at any time while in use. This has been a cause of some misunderstanding and, in a few cases, of unpleasantness. The reluctance of some to advance the small sum necessary to obtain a second-hand book is astonishing. Notwithstanding our instructions to teachers to let no books go except for cash, means are sometime employed to steal or get possession of books without paying for them, that are more ingenious than creditable. We think our rule the best practicable; but are willing to receive instructions from the town. If the people wish us to sow the books broadcast at the close of every term, trusting to their being returned when wanted, let us be so instructed by vote. The expense might not be more than double what it now is.

Our statistics of attendance are in close agreement with those of the two preceding years. Comparison with the year 1880 shows scarcely any change. We seem to be neither advancing nor retrograding. Comparison with a more distant past, and with other towns, is less reassuring.

It is especially to be regretted that pupils leave school at so early an age. At the age of fifteen, just as his mind is attaining the vigor and comprehensiveness requisite to the profitable pursuit of the higher studies, the pupil is withdrawn from school because his time is thought too valuable! What a mistaken notion of the value of time and the ends of existence! Lucrative indeed must be his employment, if it is to compensate him for the loss of a year's study at this time. It is, perhaps, not generally known that our laws now require school attendance to the age of sixteen.

Our schools were never so well equipped as now. "Gay's Book-keeping" and "Dole's American Citizen" have lately been adopted as text-books. Perhaps elementary Algebra should be added. Our children have but faithfully to make use of the advantages the town freely offers, to obtain the fundamentals of a good English education, embracing all the essentials of a true manhood and womanhood; fitting them for business and for eminence and usefulness as citizens, and introducing them to the higher enjoyments of the cultivated mind through acquaintance with noble literature.

Dated at Northwood this 28th day of January, 1893.
